

The FCC's action is limited to new models of foreign-made, consumer-grade routers. Consumers may continue to use routers they have already acquired, and retailers may continue to ...

This designation effectively prohibits the import of all consumer routers that are not produced in the United States. Click here to continue reading the full version of this alert.

The Federal Communications Commission ("FCC") has taken a significant and unprecedented step in its ongoing supply chain and national security initiative by adding consumer ...

You can still use your current Wi-Fi router safely--the ban doesn't affect the one you use in your home. (These are the modem-routers we recommend.)

The Federal Communications Commission's recent addition of consumer-grade routers newly produced outside the United States to its Covered List marks another notable expansion of the ...

What is the impact of the FCC adding routers produced in a foreign country to the Covered List? Do consumers currently using covered routers in ...

The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) recently issued a Public Notice adding foreign-made consumer-grade routers to its Covered List, thereby prohibiting the authorization and ...

The FCC published an official FAQ on its foreign router Covered List update. Here is what businesses, retailers, and consumers actually need to know right now.

Producers of consumer-grade routers are encouraged to submit an application for Conditional Approval using the guidance attached to the determination. Applications should be submitted to conditional ...

On March 23, 2026, the Federal Communications Commission enacted one of the most sweeping consumer technology restrictions in American regulatory history: a blanket prohibition on the import ...

What is the impact of the FCC adding routers produced in a foreign country to the Covered List? Do consumers currently using covered routers in small and home offices need to do anything? ...

Web: <https://busydoniemiecwaldii.pl>